"The ISSA expects to announce soon the location of the ISSA United States Championships and other possible events including a senior women's tournament," offered Greg Thomas, ISSA Deputy Executive Director. "We have had dozens of requests in recent years to globally expand our tournament offerings, so this year we have begun the process of identifying appropriate venues where we would have committed local staffing to help organize and host great ISSA senior tournaments." The ISSA does not require player registration fees or team registration fees and look forward to working with the senior players around the United States and internationally to provide high quality events that the players have become accustomed to at their World Championships.
